A PUZZLE.
I am constrained to plant a grove,
To satisfy the girl I love;
The grove I plant must be composed
Of nineteen trees in five straight rows,
And in each row five trees be placed,
I must never see her face.
Ye men of art, great men of mind,
To satisfy this curious mind.

Why the Negro was Created Black.
Communication in the N. Y. World
That the negro was formed for the climate of Africa the whole structure of his body seems to prove. First, as a protection to the brain against the direct rays of the sun, his hair is made to grow short and curly, and he is provided with a skull of enormous thickness. In no other being do we see the wisdom of the Creator more clearly exhibited than in the construction of the African. The soles of his feet are overlaid with a thick layer of fat—a bad conductor of heat—thereby enabling him to walk at his ease over the burning sands, forming for him a far better protection than any contrivance the art of man could devise. And now you may ask why did God make the African black? I answer in order that he may be able to keep cool in that torrid climate. A black surface will radiate or part with heat much more rapidly than a white one, an experiment that any one may try. Take two vessels that are in every respect the same—two teapots, for instance, let one of them be covered with white paper, then fill them both with boiling water, and you will find that the black one will be cold much sooner than the bright one. I believe all scientific men agree that since the creation of man a large tract of land stretching out from Africa to New Holland has been submerged, and is now covered by the Indian Ocean. This would readily account for the negro being an inhabitant of that country, and such a change must have very much modified the climate of Australia. I have no doubt that in past ages the different races of men must have been far more numerous than at the present. Those great revolutions that raised the Alps from the bed of the ocean, which submerged whole continents while they brought others into existence, must have swept away whole races of men, while others were lost sight of, like the ten tribes of Israel, through amalgamation. I think that it is plain that the African was a distinct race from the beginning, and that the only reason for forming him as he is was simply that all the earth may be inhabited.

Washington's Masonic Apron.
In 1776 there was sitting at the table of the commandant of Metz, in Germany, a distinguished son of an ancient noble French family. During the conversation at the table the Duke of Gloucester, brother to the King of England, spoke of the Declaration of Independence, just put forth by the Anglo-American colonies, and of the strong measures adopted by the British Ministry to crush the rising rebellion. The young nobleman listened in silence. He was a high and noble person, and his appearance, just past eighteen, but of the heart of a patriot and hero was beating beneath his closely buttoned coat, and his imagination and zeal were fired at the recital of a people fighting for liberty. He rose from the table hurriedly, made his arrangements to return to Paris, and revealed his high resolve to his equally enthusiastic young wife. He came to America, sought the acquaintance of the Commander-in-Chief of the American Army, and volunteered to fight in the cause of American liberty.

Life, youth, fortune, and the endearments of home were all freely devoted to colonial emancipation. Just the method to awaken the nobler sentiments of the heart, self-sacrificing devotion to the interests of others. Washington felt the electric shock from this benevolent heart, and took Lafayette to his bosom; nor was the bond severed till death gave the stroke of mortal separation.

After the close of the war the young nobleman, with more of manly maturity, returned to Paris, and over and over again, in glowing eloquence, rehearsed the noble virtues of the great American leader to his young and charming wife. She, like every true woman, was always deeply interested in everything that engaged the attention of her husband. She soon came to reverence Washington with a feeling closely allied to that of devotion. She corresponded with him, and received from him liberal invitations to the simple delights of rural life at Mount Vernon.

In 1781 Lafayette determined to visit Washington in his retirement. Madame Lafayette earnestly desired to present some visible testimony of her regard to the great patriot. Besides the bond of personal friendship there was a bond of union between Washington and Lafayette of a different character. They were members of the fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, and both loved the "sacred brotherhood." Madame Lafayette took advantage of this charm to add interest to her testimonial of esteem. She prepared with her own hands an apron of white satin, upon which she wrought in needlework all the various emblems of the Masonic Order. This she sent with her husband to be presented to her ideal of true greatness at Mount Vernon. It was kept by Washington as a cherished memorial of a noble woman during his life. It now occupies a conspicuous place on the walls of the Grand Masters room in Masonic Hall, Philadelphia.—Benson J. Lossing.

WHAT IS AN EDITOR?—Why, he is a man who reads the newspapers, writes articles on any subject, talks to all who call, is blamed for a hundred things which are no body's business but his own, helps people to get in office (who forget all about it afterward), and frequently gets cheated out of half his earnings. He works and does more to build up the town than any other body.

A California Obituary.

Boddlepost is dead! The bare announcement will plunge the city into unspeakable gloom. The death of Boddlepost was untimely; he should have died twenty years ago. Probably no man of his day has exerted so peculiar an influence upon society as the deceased. Ever foremost in every good work out of which anything could be made, an unsolicited dispenser of every species of charity that paid a commission to the dispenser. Mr. Boddlepost was a model of generosity, and weighed at the time of his death, one hundred and ninety odd pounds. Originally born in Massachusetts, but for nineteen years a native of California, and partially bald, possessing a cosmopolitan nature that loved a York shilling as well in proportion to its value, as a Mexican dollar; the subject of our memoir was one whom it was an honor to know, and whose close friendship was a luxury that only the affluent could afford. It shall ever be the writer's proudest boast that he enjoyed it at less than half the usual rates. Mr. B. was the founder of the now famous Boddlepost Institute, and for many years preceding his death, suffered severely from a soft cora, which has probably done as much for agriculture as any similar concern on the foot-hills of our State. In 1863, he was elected an honorary member of the society for the prevention of humanity to Mongolians, and but for the legs of an eye in carrying out its principles would have been one of the handsomest whites that ever resided among us. There is little doubt that he might have aspired to any office in the gift of the people so universal was the esteem in which he was held by those he voted for. In an evil moment he was induced to associate himself in business with the Rev. Albert Williams, and though he speedily withdrew from the firm, he was never able wholly to eradicate the disgrace from his constitution, and it finally earned him to his grave. His last words, as he was snuffed out, were characteristic of the man; he remarked: "Fetch me that old-nanny tea." The entry consolation arrived too late to be of any use; he had gone to the devil. Farewell, noble heart—pure soul—bright intellect! We shall meet again.

A BEAUTIFUL CUSTOM.—In the mountains of the Tyrol, it is the custom of the women and children to come out, when it is bed-time, to sing their national songs, until they hear their husbands, fathers and brothers answer them from the hills on their return home. On the shores of the Adriatic such a custom prevails. There the wives of the fishermen come down about sunset, and sing a melody. After singing the first stanza, they listen awhile for the answering strain from off the water, and continue to sing and listen, till the well-known loved ones are almost home. How sweet to the weary fishermen, as the shadows gather round him, must be the songs of the loved ones at home, who sing to cheer him; and how they strengthen and tighten the bonds that bind together these humble dwellers by the sea! Truly it is among the lowly in this world that we find some of the most beautiful customs in practice.

DEATH OF CAPT. THOMAS STEELE.

The numerous friends, in this and several adjoining counties, of the late Capt. Thomas Steele were no less shocked than pained at the sudden intelligence of his death in New Orleans, a week or two since, received in this city some time last week. Almost contemporaneous with the announcement of his death followed the arrival of his corpse in our midst. His remains were at once deposited in the vault of the cemetery at this place, and the next day buried in the family lot in the presence of the family connection, and a few old and warmly attached personal friends. We have not learned the particulars of Captain Steele's death, but presume that his disease was consumption, or some other affection of the lungs, with which we understand he has been threatened for some years. Captain Steele was the son of the late Colonel John Steele, of Woodford county, in this State, where he was born in the year 1806. For many years he lived in this county, where he was always regarded as a man of mark, character, enterprise, and influence. By his open frank, and manly bearing, as also by his bold, decided, and generous character, he attracted to himself hosts of devoted friends, not only in this and his native county, Woodford, but in all this part of the State. He was quick, impulsive, generous, and fearless to the last degree, at all times true to his convictions and friendships, if at others somewhat warm and stern, in his sentiments. Whatever his feelings or opinions at any time were, no man could mistake them. Both friend and foe could at all times place him, and this perfect sincerity, both in character and action, combined with the most impetuous of spirit and strength of purpose, gave him a strong hold upon his personal friends, and enabled him to exert a marked influence over those with whom he associated. He was an ardent Southern man during the war, and in consequence of his ultra Southern views, was compelled to spend several years of forced exile in Canada. Only a few months ago we met him in this city, and he thought that we should soon be called on to chronicle the sad intelligence of his death. But such is human life. While reason recognizes and submits to the unchanging decrees, friendship and affection can but sorrow over the relentless blow whenever it falls.

BALLOON ASCENSION TO-DAY.—By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that Prof. Louis Dupuy, who, during the siege of Paris, was in charge of the balloon service of France, and, since his arrival in this country, has made several successful trips from New York, up the Hudson, to Poughkeepsie, will make an ascension from the top of the Capital Hotel to-day, at 11 o'clock. The Professor proposes to go to Lexington, and he informs us that he has produced the art of steering a balloon to such perfection that he can reach there with accuracy in one hour and a quarter. The balloon—"City of Paris"—is light but strong, being made of oiled silk and provided with a simple but very effective steering apparatus, which gives the Professor complete control over it. The inflating gas used is pure hydrogen, affording capacity to transport three passengers besides the professor. We learn that several of our councilmen propose to take the trip, having been invited by the Professor, who bears the highest credentials. The ascension will take place from 11 to 11, Captain McGill having kindly assented to the arrangement to start from the top of the Capital Hotel. A rare treat is in store for the curious.

DIS-TRUSSING CASUALTY.—A BOY KILLED BY HIS BROTHER.—It is our painful duty to record another fatal accident as the result of the misadventure of fire-arms. On yesterday two sons of Mr. F. Mitchell, who lives in this county, near the mouth of Glenn's creek—the elder about 13 and the younger about 7—having returned from school about one o'clock, the elder asked his mother to let him have the gun to shoot some ducks on the creek. She refused, and chided him, but the little fellow, intent upon the sport, by some means got possession of an old pistol, and procuring an ammunition started out with his little brother duck hunting. It was a single-barreled pistol, without a trigger, and had been regarded as a harmless weapon. But the little fellows loaded it, and in some mysterious way it went off, and the younger of the brothers was shot, the ball entering his left breast and coming out near the right shoulder, causing his death in a few minutes.

Two companies of the Fourth United States Infantry arrived here on the 30th, and went into camp in Mr. Norton's vacant lot in South Frankfort, just below Dudley's saw-mill. Regimental Headquarters are in the building opposite the depot, once occupied by the Military Board, and latterly known as Watson's Hotel. The following are the officers of the command:

Colonel and Brevet Brigadier General F. P. Flint, commanding regiment.
Lieutenant George O. Webster, Adjutant.
Brevet Captain Thomas F. Quinn, 1st Lieutenant and acting Quartermaster.
Brevet Major and Captain W. S. Collier, commanding Company K.
Brevet Major and Captain W. H. Powell, commanding Company G.
Lieutenant Horace Neitce.
Lieutenant Theodore E. True.

A WONDERFUL NATURAL PHENOMENON.—One of the most remarkable curiosities we have seen in a long time is a horned frog, brought here by a soldier belonging to Company "G," of the 4th Infantry, which arrived here since our last. It is of a species peculiar to the plains near Fort Laramie, in which they have come, and has attracted the attention and curiosity of the learned in Louisville, as well as here. A large number of persons visited the camp yesterday to see it. Private Thomas Stearns is the "fortunate owner of the phenomenon, and has, we learn, been offered a large sum for it, but declines to part with it, and takes pleasure in exhibiting it to all who wish to see it. It is certainly a rare curiosity in this latitude.

REMARKABLE ENIGMA.

The following lines, written by a friend at our elbow, though they appear meaningless and without point, will bear a close study, and when fully understood will cause much wonder:

Ladies and gentlemen! Teddy O Neel
Opened a hole in the ice with his heel—
Opened a very small hole in the ice
For what, I believe, was a wicked device.

Larry McGrawnaghan coming to skate,
In never a thought of his ultimate fate,
Right up to the office went with a dash—
Popped under the ice—this settled his hash;

And I, with a view to a similar trick,
Under your feet am removing a brick—
Open your eyes for I swear by my soul,
You all are in danger of finding a hole.

AN IMPORTANT COUNTY ENTERPRISE—THE FRANKFORT AND FLAT CREEK TURNPIKE.

We publish in another column an article upon this road, taken from yesterday's issue of the Commonwealth. We fully endorse everything said by our neighbor upon this subject, having heretofore expressed our opinion as to the great importance to the city of the extension of this road. It will penetrate an immense forest, almost at our very doors, and, while necessarily cheapening the cost of an article of such universal necessity and use as fire wood, will settle up and develop the resources of what we might now characterize as almost a wilderness, within a few miles of the city, but which, with ordinary cultivation, will soon become an important element in its trade and business. We know of no project or improvement connected with either county or city now contemplated which holds out so favorable a prospect of advantage to both, or appeals so strongly to the support of our citizens; and we are more than pleased to learn that they have so universally manifested their appreciation of its importance, and expressed their appreciation in the almost unanimously signed petition referred to. The popular expression in its favor could scarcely be more decided and unanimous than this. To us, it seems that the council should consider it as conclusive upon the subject, and without further ado make the slight subscription asked, if for no higher reason, at least in deference to the great Democratic principle of submission, within the sphere of law, to the will of the people. The slight additional taxation required for the purpose will scarcely be felt by any one, and will be more than saved every year, as is well stated by the Commonwealth, to all tax-payers in the reduction of cost of fuel and coal.

The construction of only a few miles of this road has already reduced the cost of wood in our market from $1 per cord, at which it was selling last year, to $1, at which price it can readily be bought on the streets to-day, and will thus save to our citizens in this one article alone from five to ten thousand dollars the present year. Its further extension, if it does not actually reduce its cost below $1 per cord, which is highly probable, will, at all events, prevent its advance to former figures, and thus undoubtedly be the source of an annual gain to our people of from five to ten thousand dollars, as by the most careful estimates, it is computed that not less than from eight to ten thousand cords of wood are consumed in the city every year. Could ten thousand dollars be possibly lavished in any other way so as to yield so large a return? for what is saved is virtually that much clearly gained, and in this light our people undoubtedly regard the proposition. Common respect and justice to them alike require that their wishes should be carried out by the council voting the subscription. If the people wish to impose a slight additional taxation upon themselves for a specific object, by which they reasonably expect to derive great and immediate profit, why should the council interpose to prevent it, or what is equivalent to veto, refuse, in their names, to impose upon them the taxation asked? The burden, if burden that can be called, which will result in great immediate gain, will fall upon the petitioners. If they not only consent, but actually ask to bear it, there is no valid reason why their request should be denied.

While we warmly commend the spirit of judicial retrenchment and economy in the administration of city affairs inaugurated by the present council, and think that the good faith and credit of the city should be maintained at every hazard, still the wheels of progress must not, in the meantime, be altogether stopped. No Canaan wall should be built around the city, and everything connected with it re-institutionary, while a debt of thirty years accumulation is sought to be liquidated in three or four. Retrenchment should go hand in hand with enterprise, economy be the companion and incentive to development. Thus and thus only will our city duly grow in business, population, and prosperity, while its resources will be constantly augmenting, its credit remain intact, and its securities ever advance, instead of depreciate in market value. We have said thus much with no disposition to find fault with the present council's system of financial administration, which, in the main, we highly approve, but with the double object of expressing our most cordial endorsement of the particular enterprise referred to, and of the city's subscription to its stock as petitioned for by the great mass of the citizens, and provided for by law, and at the same time of defining our own general views as to the true financial policy that should be pursued with regard to city affairs.

We are happy to announce that Geo. Blair and Pat. Doyle, who, on Wednesday, had the misfortune to fall from Jim. Welsh's building, are doing well, and will, within a short time, entirely recover from the injury they sustained. It has been ascertained that the only bone broken in either was one of the smaller bones of Doyle's clavicle. Beyond this they only experienced a few rather ugly cuts and bruises, which time will soon heal.

Governor Leslie has been absent for several days on a visit to Glasgow, but is expected to return to-day.

FORTY-SECOND CONGRESS—FIRST SESSION.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, March 30.
The House proceeded with the consideration of the Ku-Klux bill.
Mr. Beck, of Kentucky, speaking of the bill, said: "The banishing of the President, after a barbarous incubation, had been hatched, and was now before them, to destroy the rights of the States and people, and put into the hands of the President the only power which he held here, omnipotent power everywhere. This bill would make the President dictator of the country and over the liberties of the people, and those who aided and abetted the bill would become more odious than the Ku-Klux desperadoes of the South. The pretext for the passage of this bill was to afford an excuse for the act of war, murder, and Ku-Klux, so as to divert the people from thinking of the extravagant class of legislation, and bonds, lands, and railroad swindles."

Mr. Blair, of Michigan, thought that it was not law that was wanted, but the execution of the law. The enforcement could be secured by the President, and the Congress, but the President was not a usurper, and the clamor about danger was merely made to help the Democratic party.

Fernando Wood denounced the bill as making the President a lawless dictator, responsible to no one. Congress had a higher duty to perform than to give a sanction to the bill. It is the duty of Congress to provide for the reduction of taxation and expenditure; to abolish sinecure offices; to restore currency to a specie basis; reduce the army to a peace footing; provide against the accumulation and retention of large sums of money in the public treasury; to prevent the purchase and sale of the public credit by the Secretary of the Treasury at his own option; to bring the President and his Cabinet advisers under the authority of the law, and make them obedient to its provisions; and, alike with others, subject to its penalties; restore the Southern States and people to peace, prosperity, and contentment; and to meet the emergency of the country by vindictive legislation and military interference, and the recognition of their equal rights, including self-government and political equality with the other States and people, and revive American commerce.

Mr. Maynard read an article from the Chattanooga Times of March 30, 1871, which said: "The Ku-Klux bill is a bill to give a sanction to the outrages committed in the South by organized bodies of masked marauders, some of whom belong to the secret political society called the Ku-Klux." Mr. Maynard said, this admission came from a friend of the gentleman on the other side.

Mr. Maynard charged Maynard with having cut the article in two, and then he read the entire article, in which was substance that the outrages by the Ku-Klux were simply a pretext to station troops in the South, so as to carry the Presidential election by force for the Republican party, &c.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, March 30.
Senator Davis, of Kentucky, in his speech to-day, referring to the late John A. Stevenson, said: "A more lawless dictator was never in power than that same Dictator in War, and if justice had been dealt out to him in his lifetime for his crimes, he would have been hung a hundred times for murder, and put in the penitentiary ten thousand times for his crimes. Stevenson was a man of high standing in the South, and particularly in his own State. He defended the loyalty and law-abiding character of the people of Kentucky, and commiserated various grievances to which they had been subjected to at the hands of the General Government; among which was the refusal to make money orders by their money order, and his enlistment in the army at the beginning of the war in Kentucky; Maryland and other loyal States, Congress had refused the appropriation of $200 for each slave, and he believed the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Sherman) was among those who voted."

Mr. Davis then held in his hand a list of the victims of the murders and outrages committed in Kentucky during the last month of 1865, and the first month of 1866, and to this he invited the attention of Senators Davis and Stevenson. It appeared that in this time there were eighteen murders of freedmen, and two hundred and thirty-three cases of freedmen who had been tortured by their owners, for some white Union men were at the same time murdered, and four others assaulted, with intent to kill. It might be an interesting task for the two Senators from Kentucky to attempt to furnish a list of the offenders who had suffered death or imprisonment for these outrages, had there been a state court of jurisdiction. The honorable Senators might argue from now to eternity, but they could not obliterate these facts.

Mr. Davis replied that many outrages were committed by negroes upon negroes. It was certainly true that such lawlessness had prevailed in Kentucky. Just after the war the soldiers of both armies were wandering about plundering, and were seeking private revenge, but now comparative quiet prevailed.

Mr. Stevenson said the only fault of the people of Kentucky was in failing to believe in the superiority of the negro race. He read extracts from a speech delivered by the Senator from Indiana in 1855, opposing negro suffrage as dangerous to the country and holding negroes to be unfit to wield the franchise, and that they should undergo a probationary period.

Mr. Morton proceeded to read what he stated to be the official list of murders and outrages committed in Kentucky.

Mr. Stevenson inquired what official list he meant.

Mr. Morton replied it was the official record prepared by the Freedmen's Bureau. [Derisive laughter on the Democratic side.]

Mr. Stevenson—We don't recognize the Freedmen's Bureau as authority in Kentucky.

Mr. Morton—You don't recognize any authority; you don't allow negroes to testify; and if you could succeed in extending all testimony it would be easy for you to prove Kentucky a law-abiding State.

Mr. Davis, of Kentucky, offered a resolution instructing the Secretaries of the Treasury, War, and Navy to report the amount and ownership of property seized since July 1st, 1865, for their departments, now disposed of, and the disposition and proceeds of sales of such property.

Our merchants who have been East for their goods have been busy ever since their return making and arranging their extensive stocks. Messrs. J. L. Moore & Son, it will be seen from their advertisement elsewhere, have gotten through with this work, and are now prepared to meet the demands of their customers and the public generally. Their purchases were made, as usual, by Leon L. Moore, in whose discriminating taste and judgment the ladies especially have every confidence.

Attention is called to the notice of Grant Green, cashier of the Farmers' Bank, by which it will be seen that the annual meeting of the stockholders of that institution will be held on the 1st day of May.

Some seventy thousand barrel staves and hoop-poles have lately been received at Upper Blue Licks, from Morgan county. These will be manufactured into barrels for the transportation of Blue Lick water.

FRANKFORT AND FLAT CREEK TURNPIKE ROAD.

We have just been shown by Mr. Harvie, President of the above road, a petition signed by almost every leading citizen and tax-payer of the city, down to the most humble, and to which we have ourselves cheerfully subscribed, requesting the city council to subscribe $2,000 to the capital stock of the said road on behalf of the city, a late act of the Legislature having authorized the subscription. It seems to us that there can be no possible question as to the wisdom and sound policy of this subscription. At this time, on the part of the city. The petition itself is one of, if not the most truly representative paper we have ever seen gotten up for any purpose whatever. It presents almost unanimous expression of the citizens of every class, trade, profession, and degree of wealth, in favor of the proposition. At least four-fifths, if not nine-tenths of the property and taxation of the city is represented by the names attached, while in a purely numerical view, probably two-thirds or more of the actual tax-payers have already signed it. It amounts in fact to an almost unanimous expression of opinion upon such a subject to a representative body, such as the city council, it appears to us that this petition should certainly carry with it that weight, and be so treated by the council. But aside from any consideration that may be due to it as embodying the almost universal feeling of the entire community (from school-boys, business men, and tax-payers of all grades) upon this subject, it can be indisputably shown that in the reduced cost of one article of daily use alone, viz: firewood, our citizens would annually save more than the entire amount of the subscription asked. In other words, it is from the very nature of the incidental advantages to be derived from the extension of this road, and the probability that the stock itself will, in a year or so, yield a handsome dividend, the investment will, in the way we have indicated, yield to our people an annual return of from 10 to 200 per cent. on the original outlay. In short, it will be simply the investment of one dollar today to realize through a direct channel, from two to five hundred dollars in a year or so.

In view of all the facts, the almost universal wish of the people that the subscription should be made, the great saving in the cost of fuel that will inevitably result from the extension of the road, and the increased impetus it will necessarily give to the general trade and business of the city, we sincerely hope that the council will promptly defer to the expressed wish of the people in this matter, as embodied in the petition, and make on their behalf the subscription asked.

TAKE WARNING.—Since the election of John Quincy Adams in 1824, no party which had lost the control of the House of Representatives in the middle of a Presidential term has ever ventured, with two exceptions, to renominate its President. Those exceptions were Mr. Adams in 1828, and Mr. Van Buren in 1836. Their overwhelming defeat when they ran a second time stands as a warning to deter any party from repeating the experiment.

DEATH.—Gloom has shrouded over our entire community by the death of Mr. G. M. Taylor, who died on Tuesday morning. Mr. Taylor was one of our most estimable and enterprising citizens, and his nobleness of heart endeared him to all who knew him. We have indeed sustained a loss.

'An Ounce of Prevention is Better than a Pound of Cure.'

This is the most sickly period of the year, but there is a remedy which is a constant protection against the causes of disease; it enters softly into the circulation of the blood, expels the morbid substances collected therein during the winter; corrects all morbid humors in the blood; restores the supply and quality and equalizes the circulation of the blood; promotes the operations of the digestive organs; acts as a mild and efficacious stomachic; strengthens the nervous fibres and the nervous system; removes biliary obstructions and restores the purgative energies; it imparts vitality and elasticity to every organ of the human body. It is no less celebrated a preparation than WINDMILL HILL BITTERS. PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR.

9300 REWARD.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, IT HAS BEEN MADE KNOWN to me that WILLIAM HOPKINS, WILLIAM MARTIN, and ALFRED HOPKINS are indicted in the Circuit Court for the murder of James Steele, and are now fugitives from justice, going at large;

Now, therefore, I, PRESTON H. LESLIE, Acting Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, do hereby offer a reward of THREE HUNDRED DOLLARS, each, for the apprehension of said Hopkings, and their delivery to the jailer of this county.

In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the Seal of the Commonwealth to be affixed. Done at Frankfort, the 20th day of March, A. D. 1871, and in the 75th year of the Commonwealth.

Home Manners.

Good home manners, says a writer in Wood's Household Magazine, are the foundation and the superstructure of good manners everywhere else. The idea that it is of little moment how we behave at home, provided we are courteous and polite in company, is a radically wrong one. Persons often allow themselves to be ill-bred at home, thinking that they can put on good manners when they choose, and appear as well abroad as others; but, unconsciously, they are continually betraying themselves. Few things are so subversive on habit as those ever-recurring little properties, graces, and amenities of social life which go to make up the well-bred man or woman. The expression, tone, carriage, manner, and language of years cannot be changed in a day, for some special occasion. The requisites of good manners are so multitudinous, it is impossible to give them all; and each, like the snow-flake which forms the avalanche, though important, is so minute in itself, that it is difficult to select any as "most essential." Good manners, at home and elsewhere, are but the outward manifestation of love, and that spirit which suffers long and is kind; which evicteth not; vaneeth not itself; is not puffed up; doth not behave itself unseemly; seeketh not its own; is not easily provoked; thinketh not evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity; beareth all things; believeth all things; hopeth all things; endureth all things.

The well-bred man and woman express by their manner that they regard the judgment, feelings, tastes, wishes, conveniences and pleasures of others as highly as their own. They strive to avoid all habits which offend the tastes, all expressions which shock the sensibilities or wound the feelings of those about them, and all needless violations of the customs and conventions of society.

The following particulars will fall under and illustrate the above general principles:

1st. Avoid all expressions which tend to irritate, embarrass, mortify, or pain any member of the family.

2d. Never allude to any fault or failing, unless with the purpose to benefit, and then in private.

3d. Avoid sarcasm, bitter words, "sure" subjects, and reference to any personal deformity.

4th. Do not ridicule, nor hold the opinion of others in contempt.

5th. Give attention when addressed, and do not interrupt nor speak when another is talking.

6th. Never contradict.

7th. Never scold.

8th. Keep your temper.

9th. Never speak in a loud or querulous tone, nor order in arbitrary or arrogant manner, child or servant.

10th. Use no slang phrases nor rude, disrespectful, profane, or inaccurate language.

11th. Never omit the "please" and "thank you," "good-night" and "good-morning," nor fail to gratefully acknowledge, by some word or look, every act of kindness and attention.

12th. These little words of the harsh machinery of life wonderfully.

13th. Do not enter even your nearest relation's private room without knocking.

14th. Never slam the doors, sit in the windows, hum, whistle, or sing in the halls or passageway to persons out of windows and up stairways.

15th. Teach children to offer precedence to each other, and to their superiors, to avoid awkward positions and movements, and not to indulge in disagreeable or filthy personal habits, such as yawning, scratching the head, picking the nose, yawning, spitting on the floor, cleaning the nails in company, etc., etc.

16th. Hold the person and personal possessions of another sacred.

He who observes this rule will not tickle nor pinch, nor punch, nor poke his friend or brother, nor will, unless he has special permission, open his letters, rummage his drawers, mark his books, finger his clothes, nor use his private property.

How Nitro-Glycerine is Made.

This wonderful explosive was discovered in 1847, by an Italian named Salsburg, but its practical application was made by Alfred Nobel, a Swedish engineer. The process by which it is made is thus described: Every one knows what glycerine is—a clear, syrupy liquid, sweet to the taste and somewhat greasy to the touch. Its scope of employment ranges from the surgeon's dispensary to the lady's hair-oil. Chemists term it trinitrate alcohol, and it may be derived from fat or tallow by the action of lime and sulphuric acid. Its properties are many and various, but as they have no bearing upon the subject we shall abstain from noticing them. If a quantity of nitric acid be added to twice its weight of sulphuric acid, glycerine be poured into this, and carefully stirred, the whole being surrounded by freezing mixture, we obtain that wonderful substance known as nitro-glycerine, which has more than ten times the explosive force of gunpowder. It runs on the surface as an oil of a pale yellow color, is perfectly inodorous, and has a sweet aromatic taste. It is poisonous whether taken internally or absorbed through the skin, and small doses of it produce distressing headaches. It does not explode when brought in contact with fire, and remains unchanged even when raised to a temperature of boiling water; but at about forty degrees Fahrenheit it becomes converted into an icy mass, which merely requires friction to develop all its explosive qualities.

FARM FACTS AND FANCIES.

Every farmer should have a brand to mark his cattle and tools. It will save its cost often.

It seems reasonable that a laboring horse should have a room to lie in at night, where he can turn over and shift about.

Don't live another year without a tool room. It will save hours of vexatious search for forks and shovels, that should be ready without a moment's delay.

If new tools, unpainted, are soaked with raw linseed oil, they will work easier and last longer. Why don't manufacturers do it by the wholesale?

If your colts are hard to get into the barn after their daily exercise, let them find a few oats in their manger after coming in, and that trouble is over.

It is claimed that rats may be prevented from gnawing barns by mixing with the oil applied a little cayenne pepper, say a teaspoonful to the quart.

Two dollars a day for a farm hand makes it important that he should have good tools to work with. They cost considerable. Insist that he use them for the purpose for which they are made.

A Lowell gardener is marketing a fine lot of lettuce raised under glass, but without other heat than the suns. At night, and during the coldest weather he covers the beds with thick straw matting; the plants occasionally freeze, but he understands how to thaw them without injury, and they go on growing again.

A recent visitor to a Texas jail, who asked a negro what brought him there, was told, "Two or de State perlice." And when he asked further if drunkenness had not something to do with it, the negro replied, promptly, "Yes, ear, they was bof drunk."

A candidate for the position of school-teacher in Kansas, recently replied to a question by the examiners, "Do you think the world is round or flat?" by saying, "well some think one way and some another; and I'll leave round or flat, just as the parson please."

What do you often drop and never stop to pick up? A hint.
